It was pointed out, however, that the formal invitation is subject to the decision of the Republican state committee.

The Ohio campaign assumed almost national importance and gives indication of having a great bearing on the presidential contest in 1928 with the added announcement Senator Willis expects to visit the Pine camp in the Adirondack mountains for a conference with President Coolidge before the filing of the Ohio campaign file.

Victories for Senator Willis and Mrs. Cooper in November may shadow the result of the presidential election, Cooper is scheduled to come to Yellow Springs this week to confer with Senator Fess.

Senator Willis, commenting upon his nomination by the Republican party, declared "I am gratified and will give my efforts to merit the confidence reposed in me by the voters of Ohio."

Senator Willis has outlined a plan for the next week that will keep him busy until the opening of the Republican platform convention in Columbus, August 24.

Will address a veterans' reunion at Cadiz Tuesday and talk with farmers' picnic, Wednesday evening. He will leave for the National Business League in Cleveland August 19 and will address the American Prospect, Marion County, will spend August 20 in Columbus office and August 21 will travel to Cincinnati to the Blaine Club by special train. UNITED STATES WILL KEEP OUT OF MEXICAN DISPUTE IS REPORT

Coolidge Says Government Has No Authority To Interfere—Continue To Investigate Military Coup

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The United States Government cannot interfere in the church and state controversy in Mexico, President Coolidge declared today.

His spokesman declared unconditionally that under no law did this government have authority to interfere in such purely domestic problems. Only one complaint of seizure of American property has been made to the state department. Mr. Coolidge's spokesman said and the Mexican government has promised to make immediate adjustment of that one case.

The administration will certify, however, the spokesman declared, that this government will do what it can to have claims collected.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 17.—Anticipating the discovery of further supplies and munitions believed to have been intended for use by Mexican plotters under General Enrique Estrada, under arrest here, American and Mexican authorities announced they expected further uncovering of war materials designed to be employed in an insurgent movement.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17.—American tourists arriving here said that when they crossed the border immigration and revenue authorities lifted up seats in cars, took down berths and sounded floors searching for arms and ammunition.

The arrest of a group of Mexican plotters at San Diego has created excitement in official and Catholic circles, although the government has not yet made any official statement about the arrests. It is known however, that the government was pleased by the action of American officials.

The Episcopate has issued a statement saying that archbishop Mora has prohibited the faithful from entering churches in Merida, Yucatan, where the municipal authorities appointed communists.

LILLIAN CANNON IS FORCED TO ABANDON CHANNEL ATTEMPT

Baltimore Girl Is Disappointed Due To Storm

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, Aug. 1.—Battered by a terrific storm Miss Lillian Cannon of Baltimore was forced to abandon an attempt to swim the English channel early today after she had been in the water two and a half hours, fighting her way toward the English shore. Starting at 12:55 a. m. Miss Cannon was forced to give up the effort at 3:25 a. m.

Bitterly disappointed the American girl still voiced determination to seek again to conquer the channel after the unsuccessful conclusion of her brave attempt.

"I am ready to try again this season," she said.

The American girl had made good progress at the get away and at 2:15, was 3 miles off shore. There she found heavy seas running. Then the storm broke, old seamen here described it as the most violent electrical storm in years. Strong winds swept over darkened waters and threw up great white capped waves which raced out of the night. Torrential rain fell accompanied by thunder and lightning and stinging hail came on windy gusts. The wind blew the escort tug from its course, sweeping it rapidly toward Calais. It was impossible to keep near the swimmer.

Miss Cannon still fought on through the waves and storm.

The captain of the tug at first declared he was afraid to continue, and then that it was impossible to continue. All on the craft urged Miss Cannon to come aboard. It was not until after she had struggled in the stormy waters for more than an hour after the storm broke that she finally agreed to give up. She had covered three and one half miles.

The start had been made in a calm sea, although a slight rain was falling. The water was unusually warm and conditions were considered most favorable.

GRAND JURY PROBES VOTING FRAUDS AND GANG RULE MURDERS

Special Body Meets To Consider McSwigin Death

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—A special grand jury met today to investigate election frauds and their possible connection with "Gang Rule" in Chicago. It is the fourth grand jury called for a special inquiry since Deputy State Attorney William A. McSwigin was murdered five months ago.

No one has been indicted for the McSwigin murder but the counter-inquiry into election frauds has resulted in sixty indictments. McSwigin was murdered on April 27, as he stood in front of a saloon. Hundreds of police were concentrated on the crime. A "super grand jury"—one composed of leading business men—was called in the case.

The grand jury adjourned without naming the McSwigin slayers, but did suggest that the head of the state parole board, Will Colvin be asked to resign. Colvin resigned.

After adjournment of the first grand jury a special jury was called to investigate the McSwigin murder and election frauds. That was the June special session. The grand jury investigated election frauds and the murder. Forty indictments were named.

ONLY FOUR SMALL NATIONS FAVOR AMERICAN MEMBERSHIP IN COURT

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The Coolidge administration hopes that the large nations which are World Court members will accept American membership in the World Court on the drastic conditions laid down by congress. While only four of the forty eight members have signified their approval of American entrance. Secretary of State Kellogg, a summer White House guest, feels that if the United States waits long enough, it can be admitted.

"I am confident of the final outcome," Kellogg said in a conference with newspapermen, "but it probably will take a long time."

Kellogg seemed discouraged however, over the small number of World Court members who want America in the court. All four approvals came from minor countries, Uruguay, having consented to American entrance just before the secretary left Washington.

Kellogg said that most of the countries are withholding their decision until the league conference at Geneva next month when American entrance will be the most important subject of discussion.

PRESENT EVIDENCE ON RESPONSIBILITY IN HALL-MILLS CASE

Hundreds Gather In Court Room—Mrs. Hall Absent

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 17.—A hearing to determine whether Willie Stevens, eccentric, and Henry De La Bruyere Carpenter, Wall Street broker, should be held for complicity in the famous Hall-Mills murder case, opened today with Mrs. Hall's tan coat the center of interest.

Charles Collins, detective, was the opening witness. He told of having traced to Philadelphia, the tan cloak and scarf which Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall had sent to a dyeing establishment there immediately after the murder of Rev. Edward W. Hall, her husband.

He declared his purpose was to learn whether the cloak and scarf were blood stained and as far as he could learn they were not.

The clothing had been a source of much controversy.

Opening of today's session of the hearing which was attended by some 400 men, women and girls, who had gathered around the court house as early as 7:30 a. m. to gain seats, was delayed half an hour by mysterious conferences between attorneys and the court. Testimony started without any developments from the conferences being announced however.

Stevens and Carpenter came to their seats within the rail, accompanied by officers, Carpenter serious and Stevens appearing bewildered as usual.

"Stevens looks like a man who has just been the victim of a loaded cigar and is trying to decide whether to laugh or become angry," one follower of the trial said.

There was the accustomed craning of necks in the courtroom as the two were led in. The day was exceedingly hot. Men sat hot and perspiring and the women fanned themselves with papers.

Many witnesses were present but there were no indications as to what would prove of interest. Mrs. Hall who with Stevens her brother and Carpenter, her cousin, is held on the murder charges was not present. She remained at home, as she did during yesterday's session.

HUGE BUSINESS IN 1926 IS REPORTED

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Domestic business for 1926 will exceed the $100,000,000 mark it was predicted in a report made public today by the Central division of the National Association of Credit Men.

HABITUE OF CANTON UNDERWORLD NAMED IN MURDER WARRANT

Drug Fiend Promises To Confess Part In Slaying

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17. Louis Mazer, Canton underworld habitue charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, is ready to "spill everything" to satisfy his appetite for narcotics, according to reports today from the county jail where he is held.

"Give me one pill and I'll spill everything," Mazer pleaded following a night of confinement, it was learned from one of his jailers, a deputy sheriff.

County jail authorities under orders of federal officers on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law before the murder warrant was sworn out, refused him drugs.

Mazer is a known addict. This morning, according to authorities he was in a frenzy, ready to do anything for relief from drug starvation.

Also at the county jail was Mazer's associate, Carl Studer, charged with liquor law violation and held in default of bond. He will remain here unless bail is forthcoming, but Mazer will be returned to Canton.

Before Mazer is taken back to face the murder charge, however, he will be confronted with Steve Koscholk, the witness who has identified his photograph as that of a man who took him from Massillon to Canton when the plans were being made to "punish" the young Canton publisher, for interfering with the bootlegging business.

Investigators from Canton will also see him at request of U. S. District Attorney A. E. Berstein, who is conducting a federal investigation of alleged bootlegging activities at Canton on the theory they played a part in Mellett's murder.

In a statement by Joseph Roach, Chicago criminal prosecutor immediately after justice of peace Bruce Correll issued the warrant, it was explained that Mazer was arrested on evidence gathered by Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective and his assistant George Armstrong.

Roach also said at least ten others are involved in the murder among them several members of the police department. Warrants for further arrests are expected.

The first murder charge was based on an affidavit sworn out by Michael Glenn, one of Roach's assistants.

The first actual murder charge in the now famous case was dramatic. All the principal investigators were present in the little office of the justice of the peace. Most of them had been in Cleveland during the day and Justice Correll waited late into the night for their return.

When all were assembled the murder warrant was issued. Then Roach made his statement charging ten others with complicity, charges that respected police officials played a part in the shooting from ambush of the young editor, because he was waging a newspaper campaign against lawlessness.

Mazer first came under suspicion because he was one of the group whom Mellett's campaign was affecting.

MINERS PROTEST BALDWIN MESSAGE

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Premier Baldwin's recent signed statement to the United Press was condemned today by the delegate conference on miners in session here.

In a resolution protesting against the statement, the miners said "it affords evidence that the government definitely has decided to assist the mine owners to defeat the miners by starvation."

The premier's statement dealt especially with food and related conditions in the mine areas. There was no starvation, Baldwin wrote; huge sums were being expended in poor relief, and close watch was being kept on the health of women and children of miners.

WHEREAS, the City Commission estimates that a tax for said bonds will first appear on the duplicate for the tax year 1926, and that the final tax settlement with the County Treasurer next following the inclusion of a tax for this issue in the annual budget by the County Auditor, as provided by law, will be obtained not later than the first day of September, 1927, and will require $175.00 for interest until such taxes are collected and available:

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF XENIA, STATE OF OHIO:

SECTION 1. That for the purpose of raising money in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement, by the extension of the water works on HOME AVENUE, from the old corporation line to Monroe Street; MONROE STREET, from Home Avenue south to Lake Street; WEST STREET, from Towler Road north to a distance of three hundred feet; GALLOWAY STREET, from the north line of H. SECTION 3. SECTION 4. That upon the sale of said bonds the premiums, and the accrued interest realized therefrom, shall be paid to the Sinking Fund Trustees. The par value realized from the sale of said bonds shall be placed in the City Treasury to the credit of the "Home Avenue, et al. Water Works Extension Fund," and shall be disbursed from said fund on proper vouchers, in payment of the expense of the improvement aforesaid.

SECTION 5. In the event any of the owners of said property so specially assessed shall pay their total assessments in cash within thirty days of the date of the final passage of the ordinance levying such special assessments, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued shall be reduced by deducting the amount so paid in cash from the total amount of the bonds to be issued, and the bonds herein provided for first maturing shall be correspondingly reduced by the omission of so many thereof as shall equal the amount of assessments so paid, or by changing the denomination of one of said bonds, or both, as the case may be, and the amount to be credited to the foregoing fund from the sale of said bonds shall be likewise reduced by the amount of such improvement.

SECTION 6. That all installments of said assessments and all portions thereof, together with interest thereon, shall be applied to the payment of said bonds and interest as the same shall become due, and to no other purpose whatsoever.

SECTION 7. That the faith, revenue and credit of the City of Xenia, Ohio, are hereby pledged for the prompt payment of both principal and interest on the bonds hereinbefore described in accordance with the laws and Constitution of the State of Ohio.

SECTION 8. That for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to pay the interest on the foregoing issue of bonds promptly when and as the same falls due, and also to create and maintain a fund sufficient to discharge the said bonds at maturity, there shall be, and is hereby levied on all taxable property of the City of Xenia, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually during the period for which said bonds are to run in an amount sufficient to provide a fund for the discharge of the principal of said serial bonds at maturity, which tax shall not be less than the interest and sinking fund tax required by Section 11 of Article XII of the Constitution. Provided, however, that in each year that the assessments anticipated by said bonds are payable and are applicable to the payment of such interest and principal and are appropriated for such purpose, the amount of such tax shall be reduced by the amount of the assessment so appropriated.

That said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified, levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers, in the same manner and at the same time that the taxes for general purposes for each of said years are certified, extended and collected. Said tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof. All funds derived from said tax levies hereby required, shall be placed in a separate and distinct fund, which, together with all interest collected on the same, shall be irrevocably pledged for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds when and as the same fall due.

SECTION 9. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

Passed this 12 day of August 1926.

C. A. KELBLE CELEBRATES HIS 39TH BUSINESS ANNIVERSARY

Bought $40,000 Worth Of Advertising In Long Career

For thirty-nine years Charles A. Kelble, W. Main St., merchant, has been in business in Xenia.

This unusual record was made public Tuesday when Mr. Kelble announced the thirty-ninth anniversary of his merchandising career. He began in business August 17, 1887 and although he has occupied four different locations in that time, he has always been in business on W. Main St., between Detroit and King Sts.

Mr. Kelble's first store was in a small room in a frame building where the building occupied by the famous Auto Supply Co. is now located. He later moved his business to the double rooms now used by the Jacob Hyman fruit market and the Anderson Grocery, at Main and King Sts. Later it was moved across the street to the building now occupied by the F. B. Scott tinning shop and thirteen years ago it was moved to its present location, 17 and 19 W. Main St.

Mr. Kelble was nineteen years of age when he started in business, and with him, it has grown to what is now one of the largest stores of its kind in Greene County, carrying a large stock of men's and boys' clothing and furnishings and women's, misses', children's, men's and boys' footwear.

In recent years Mr. Kelble has given much attention to civic affairs and has been active in movements designed to improve Xenia. It is believed that Mr. Kelble has built more modern homes than any other one man in the city. He was, at one time, president of the Chamber of Commerce, is a charter member of the Kiwanis Club, and is now serving as a member of the City Commission and is always pleased to align himself with the boosters of civic affairs.

"I have never stopped advertising in the Gazette one week in the thirty-nine years," Mr. Kelble said Tuesday. "I have paid the Gazette

C. A. KELBLE

In that time more than $40,000 for advertising and consider it the best money I ever spent. I give the Gazette advertising credit for a part of my success in business and if I were in business thirty-nine years longer, I would continue to advertise in the Gazette."

MILES WOMEN WALK PREPARING MEALS HAVE BEEN MEASURED

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 17.—Kitchen shortcuts to cut down mileage of the housewife preparing meals or baking a cake may be mapped out by the San Joaquin Farm Bureau home department, through the use of pedometers, in hopes of increasing efficiency in farm homes.

So far pedometer readings have revealed many interesting things. For instance, one woman walked one and three-quarters miles to get breakfast, while a neighbor, preparing breakfast for the same number of people walked only one-fourth mile. Arrangement of kitchen equipment has much to do with the difference.

Fifteen reports have been submitted to the survey board. One woman walked one-quarter mile getting breakfast, one-quarter mile getting lunch and one mile preparing dinner. Another woman walked one and three-quarters miles getting breakfast, three-quarters of a mile getting lunch and one and one-quarter miles preparing dinner.

The pedometer was not large enough to register the mileage of one woman who was baking a cake, one of the reports said.

The report of the conference president and pastors reports will be received tomorrow and new officers elected.

Among the speakers here for the meeting are: Rev. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, Washington, president of the general conference; Rev. Hugh Eldredge, West Minister, Md.; Rev. Lyman E. Thompson, field secretary of the Ohio council of churches and others.

EIGHT OUNCES OF CLOTHES ENOUGH FOR FLAPPER

In 1885 the blushing debutante was concealed beneath some fifteen pounds of cloth.

The "hour-glass" shape of 1900 was obtained only by the addition of plenty of garments.

Now Miss 1926 has her garments down to eight ounces, and still she isn't satisfied.

Xenia girls are doing their best to follow the dictates of Paris fashion and peel off their clothes until they weigh no more than eight ounces.

According to authorities this statement was originally intended to include shoes, but a few actual weight experiments proved that this was practically impossible, despite the paste-board quality of most of the modern feminine pedal adornments. So it was decided to exclude shoes and to leave the poor woman trying in vain to reconcile eight ounces with the laws of her land.

A silk-one-piece undergarment usually a teddybear or a close cousin, a pair of chiffon hose and a straight-line silk frock make up the absolute maximum of wearable garments under the new ruling. Simple, very simple.

Estimates of the number of pounds that the grand old ladies of a few decades ago wore were hard to get from Xenia women, fashionably attired in that period. Few like to admit that within their memory the sweet things were as much as five pounds. But a few intrepid souls of years that would indicate authoritative knowledge on the subject hazarded a guess that went as high as fifteen pounds.

Estimates for the lady of 1875 were few, but all agreed that fifteen pounds was a conservative guess. Yards and yards of cloth went into every gown and every gown had its matching petticoats, and underskirts, each boasting more yards of material. Then came the undergarments, drawers with innumerable ruffles and frills and chemises with pads and laces. That almost extinct contraption, the corset came in for its full share of recognition on the scales.

The batting average of the 1900's was a little less because of the more general adoption of silk, which was much lighter than the chollies and flannels of a quarter of a century earlier. The vogue of the extremely narrow waist at this time also reduced the weight although it was almost negated by the padding used to acquire the delicious curves that bugged above the waist in front and below the waist in back.

And now Miss Xenia of 1926

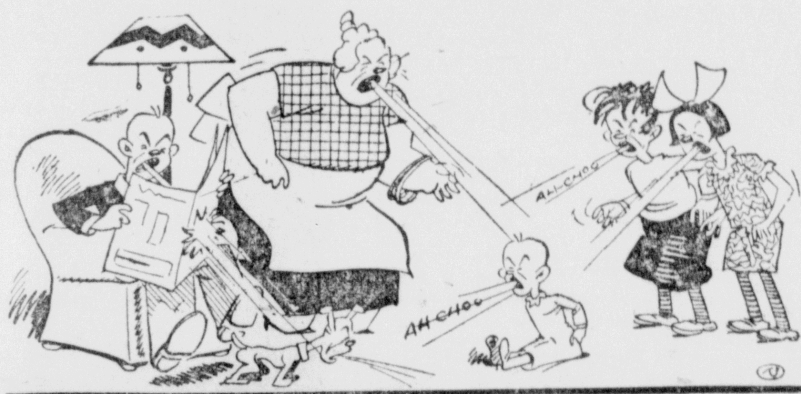

XENIA HAY FEVER VICTIMS READY TO JOIN IN ANNUAL CHORUS OF SNEEZES

The exodus of Xenians to northern pine woods has begun. Local residents are beginning to appear with reddened noses and frequent sneezes. Hay fever has made its grand entry.

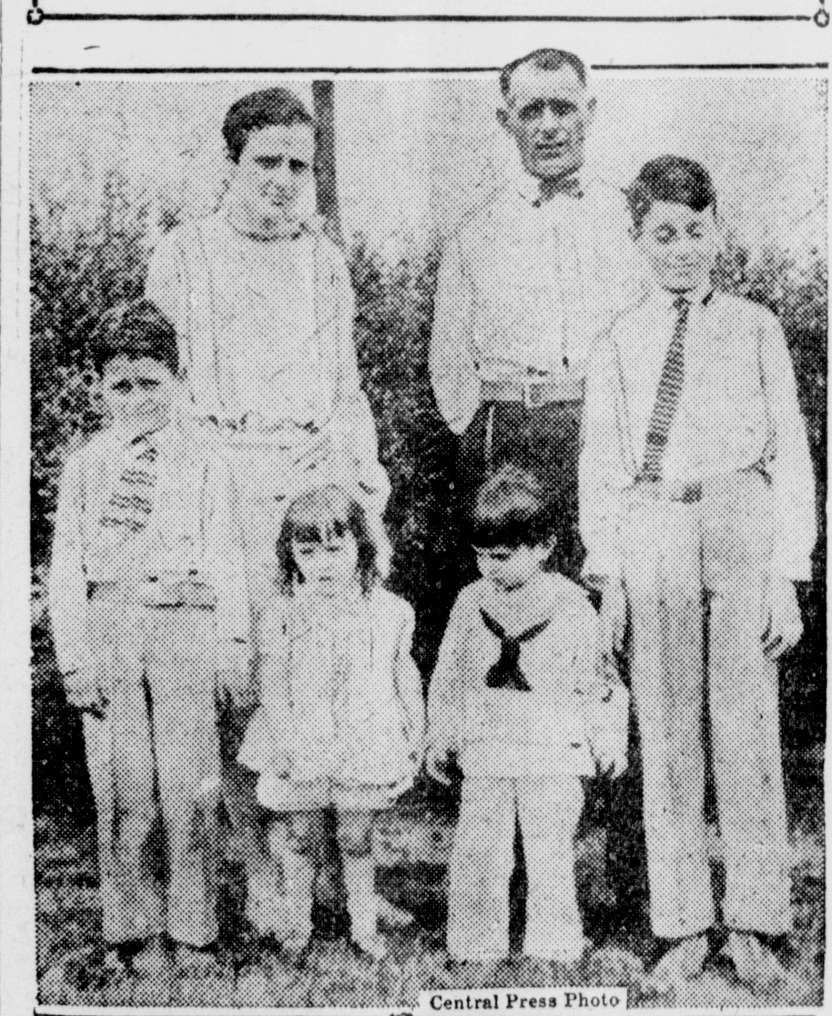

Annually, at this time of year, the city editor thinks up the clever idea of a "hay fever feature."

Hay fever is hard on budding romance. We're always "it" because our weakness to the disease is thought to enable us to give first hand information on the symptoms and reactions.

"SWEEP UP THE GLASS, PLEASE"

The Connecticut highway department has asked motorists who have been involved in collisions to "sweep up the glass, please."

It is a reasonable request.

The average motorist who has been in an accident of this kind, and survived, considers that all he has to do for the next thirty or forty minutes, or maybe an hour or two, is to argue and jot down license numbers in a notebook. He forgets about the traffic. He ignores the hooting horns of people who want to get by. He just spouts opinions, sarcasms and—in case the other fellow is not too big—very terrible threats. When he leaves, whether under his own power or that of the wrecker, the broken glass is left behind him.

We are gradually acquiring a code of manners to suit the motorized age. It is not considered proper, for instance, for a driver to take up more than four-fifths of the road. It is held to be illbred to turn a blind corner at faster than sixty miles an hour. The motorist's book of etiquette is a pretty thin volume, but it will expand as time goes on. It may come about that when two cars undertake to knock each other into the ditch and fail, that the drivers thereof will spring from their seats, grab up brooms and vigorously proceed to sweep up the glass—taking it home possibly for souvenirs of a pleasant fifteen minutes.

You can't tell. We live in a queer world.

MAKE THEM BUY IT

Of recent place in America news and pictures have been the American women presented at the British court. The chore of seeing that the ladies get into the presence and get by with their curtsy without offense to any part of the ritual is that of the wife of the American ambassador. It may be a nuisance or a pleasure to her, according to her disposition.

The trepidation and gratification of the successful candidates are complimentary to the caste system of society. The presentation gives an opportunity for a moment of self-abasement and a lifetime thereafter of self-exaltation, and that opportunity is so much though of that Americans more than any other people clamor for it. Radical western congressmen threaten the ambassador with political consequences unless he gets the favor of their wives, daughters, sisters, cousins and aunts.

London dressmakers like it because it is profitable to make presentation dresses. The English people probably do not object to a bowing down in humility to their social system. Nothing much can be done about it except one thing. The United States officially can be taken out of it, and with the ambassador and his wife conducting the candidates' end of the affair, this government is officially in it.

HINDSIGHT IS COSTLY

A large percentage of community effort and wealth is employed without cessation in undoing the mistakes of the past and posterity will spend as much or more in correcting the mistakes of the present. Foresight and the courage and means to meet the needs of the future would end this tremendous economic waste.

Railroad men estimate it would cost $10,000,000,000 to eliminate all highway grade crossings in the United States. This is about half the original construction cost of the nation's entire system of railroad tracks.

When the railroads were built, labor, construction materials and land were cheap. And, then too, even disregarding the difference in building costs, it would have been cheaper to have constructed the railroads without grade crossings than to eliminate the crossings after the rails have been laid.

Government foresight and forward looking railroad builders would have saved this generation millions in taxes, removed the cause of thousands of fatal accidents and of that vast economic loss resulting from grade crossing accidents. But government statistics indicate that two new grade crossings are established to each one eliminated at great cost to the public.

Most of the country's railroad trackage was laid before the popularization of the automobile and motor truck, so the past can be forgiven its failure to build for future traffic needs. This defense is denied this generation.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES
Young Housewife: I have heard of some kind of boiled salad dressing which I could make inexpensively, in a large quantity, and which will keep a week or so in my ice box. Could you give me the recipe?

Answer: The following recipe is just what you want. Double it for a large amount. Boiled Salad Dressing: Mix together in the upper part of a double boiler two tablespoons of granulated sugar, one tablespoon of flour, one beaten egg, one cup of cold, sweet milk, one and one-half teaspoons of dry mustard powder, one small teaspoon of salt and a piece of butter the size of a small egg. Place the pot over boiling water and stir till well heated, then add one-third cup of vinegar and continue to cook till thick. Now remove the mixture from the fire and beat smooth with an egg beater of the wheel type. Cool and chill before using. Keep in a preserve jar in the refrigerator.

One Who Experiments: "Here is a hint I discovered. A rag rug was badly stained and refused to look clean when washed several times. I did not want to bother with dyeing it, so I tried the experiment of painting it with black ink."

THE CHILD WORLD
Little Janet wears a pout.
Wonder what it's all about?
Little David's chubby hand
In her face was throwing sand.
This beyond the slightest doubt
Is good reason for a pout.

Something's wrong when boys will hurt.

Sand at such a little girl.
David's mother says that he Promptly sent to bed shall be.
Janet quite agrees he should,
Maybe next time he'll be good.

"Wait," say I with sombre face,
"Let's investigate the case."
I don't understand
What made David throw the sand?

David answers, "Well, you see
Janet threw some sand at me."

Thus the world of childhood runs.
Daughters throw at neighbors' sons.
Neighbors' sons return the sand.
Then is warfare in the land.
And when come the cry and tear
Foolish parents interfere.

Friend, for this piece of information. I wonder how red ink would turn out, used in the same way? I may try it on some scraps of rags braided!

Bride Elect: "Do I need a steel hand-chopper and wooden chopping bowl if I have one of the iron food grinders? I am trying to eliminate all unnecessary utensils from my kitchen-equipment list."

Answer: I believe you will find the hand-chopper and wood bowl equally as useful as the food grinder. The grinder, of course, has several wheel-knives, and thus will cut food fine or coarse. But with a hand-chopper you will get a clean cut, without any mashing, (in chopped-vegetable salads, for instance). The hand-chopper, too, is more easily cleaned than the grinder. Yet no kitchen is complete without the grinder.

The Theatre

Despite the economy measures in various studio organizations, there is on the way a long list of pictures costing from $500,000 to $1,500,000. Film men claim that the recent success of the $2 showings in large cities, coupled with the announcements of a $2 picture theater circuit, has spurred production of the larger films.

"Beau Geste" the Famous Play, special opening at the Criterion, New York, for a run at the $2 top week after next, is said to be a $900,000 production, while the other F. P. special for this season, "Old Ironsides," is claimed to have cost more than $1,500,000.

Metro now has "The Scarlet Letter," and "Mare Nostrum" currently playing at $2 top and each understood to around $750,000 in cost. "The Mysterious Island," next season special is budgeted by Metro to cost more than $800,000. Metro also has "The Trail of '98," scheduled as a $2 special, and made largely in Alaska, as a $4,000,000 proposition.

The John Barrymore series turned out by Warner probably rates between $750,000 and $1,000,000 in cost. "The Sea Beast" was expensive to make because of long delays on the whale episodes (finally completed through use of a rubber whale). "Don Juan" is another expensive production.

Four choristers in "The Girl Friend," at the Vanderbilt, New York, went on "strike" when called for an 11 o'clock morning rehearsal. They said the hour was unseemly. The four young men lost their jobs of course.

"The Illustrated Daily News," formerly owned by Cornelius Van-1,001,971.62. The new company derbilt, Jr., has been sold to 5,940 of its stockholders for is the Daily News Corporation of Nevada. Among the film people who had invested in the newspaper were: Charles Ray, $20,000; Jesse L. Lasky, $15,000; and Douglas Fairbanks, $10,000.

Today's Talk

ON SEEING A TOWN

A great many people see a town in the same manner as they judge human beings—by riding over the surface.

The bus may show many beautiful and interesting places, but you don't know a town until you know the people who live in it and who have given of themselves to make it what it is.

To see a town, you must talk with those who live in it. I recently drove through an interesting town. I thought I had seen about all that was worth seeing, when I dropped into a little store and began talking to a young man who had lived in the town all his life. The town took upon double interest to me when I learned about the men and women who had made it and who had done so much to make it beautiful and useful.

I am not surprised that the inhabitants of a town fight for it as they do and defend it against bad rumors. For a town is a composite of all the people and personalities of those who work and sleep in it.

Before you see a town from the seat of a bus or wagon, take a little walk. Talk to the grocer man. Pick out an intelligent clerk in any store and engage him or her in conversation. Don't forget the photographer. He knows about people. Talk to the policeman, the newsboy, or the bell boy at your hotel.

You must get the picture and spirit of a town through those who walk around on its streets day after day.

It's so with people. You can't know them by forming your opinion from some one who doesn't know them, or who merely talked with them.

You have to spend quite a spell in a person's heart before you know him.

East Side - West Side

—OF—

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

I had lunch the other day with a man who has overcome the handicap of having been born with a silver spoon in his mouth. The first twenty-five years of his life he was as useless as a broken safety razor blade. But he could balance a tea cup on his knee in the most approved manner. He played golf, tennis and ping pong with ease and proficiency. He married the daughter of another wealthy family. But his father-in-law was one of those gentlemen of the old school who believe every man should do something useful. He refused to contribute to the support of his son-in-law. He told his son-in-law to go to work. Furthermore, the old gentleman induced the boy's uncle who had kept the boy in luxury for a number of years, to deliver the same message to the young society man.

All of this made the young man mad. That was good for him. He decided he would go to work. He got a job driving a taxicab. Publicity followed and his people were embarrassed. They practically disowned him and refused to pay the bills—$25,000 "worth" of them—which the young man owed. Some of his old friends advised him to go through bankruptcy and thus be relieved of the responsibility of paying these. The young man bucked at this. He is inherently honest.

"No," he said. "I'll go to work at something that will pay well and work at it until all these debts are wiped out. The taxi business is 'out' from now on."

In a week he was working for a big insurance company. He studied the insurance business from every angle. He attended the school of salesmanship. He went at the business with the zest and determination of an eager scientist.

Today this former do-nothing is one of the best insurance salesmen in New York. In three years he has paid off more than $25,000 of the $28,000 he owed. He has self-confidence, self-respect. Furthermore, he has the respect of his father-in-law, his friends and best of all, his wife.

Harry Reichenbach, the highest salaried pres-agent in the world, is proud of his Jewish ancestry. But he takes delight in poking fun at his own people. The other day he was being interviewed by a magazine writer.

"Do you speak any foreign languages?" the writer asked.

"French, German, a little Arabian and just enough Hebrew to get through the Astor Hotel lobby!" replied Harry.

The prettiest girl I know in New York is a waitress in one of the big eating places just off Broadway. She's a small town girl, she knows big town ways. In a city where the lecherous put a premium on pulchritude this girl goes smiling on, turning a deaf ear to invitations to "wild parties," studio dinners (or suppers), visits to the roadhouses of Westchester County. She lives with her mother in a little up-town flat and there she entertains, charmingly, her small circle of friends. An apartment on Riverside Drive or Park Avenue could be hers for the asking. But she'll never live on either of those thoroughfares unless by some happy circumstance a man with brains as well as money is lucky enough to win her for a wife.

THE BEST POSSIBLE REASON FOR MISSING A TRAIN

By Jay V. Jay

Where is Mitzi? Two minutes to train time and Mitzi and the Goofer have not appeared. Everybody is explaining to everybody else just what must have happened when she enters cheerfully with the Goofer, looking guilty, tagging along. It isn't an elopement, is it? Not at all! Mitzi likes Dallas so much she simply had to buy a few things before she left. Such good shops! Polly and Aunt Sophia begin to cool off beneath their sheer coats which a moment ago seemed quite too heavy.

Mitzi wears a thin silk coat, too. It's the smartest thing for summer. Coats are of crepe, tulle, of georgette, of satin, of faille—none lined—and worn all times of the day and for all occasions. For travelling they are excellent. Not too warm, but warm enough.

What if she only succeeded in getting on the rear platform of the last car? She made it! She feels that the afternoon was a complete success what with these parcels and the silk beret which she bought in just a minute or two—not a second more!

YOUNG PLAYER MAY DISAPPOINT CLUBS THAT LET HIM SLIP

By CLARK B. KELSEY

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—There is a young baseball player coming up into the big leagues next year with the St. Louis Browns who is certain to attract attention. If he "makes the grade," there are going to be about fifteen saddened, disappointed big league managers, and if he fails to make good, there'll be many a sigh of relief.

The young man in question is Fred Schulte, a hard slugging outfielder recently purchased by the Browns from the Milwaukee club of the American Association, for a price understood to be very nearly $125,000—the highest figure ever paid for a ball player by a St. Louis team. The deal was not entirely in cash, however, Pitchers Claude Jonnard and Charley Robertson and infielder Robert Lamotte going to Milwaukee in the transaction.

Schulte is to report to the Browns next spring and then it will be that all the other managers will start watching—because it is said virtually every club in both leagues was bidding for the young man.

Schulte is 22 years old and his home is at Belvidere, Ill. He plays well either in the outfield or in the field but prefers to roam in the gardens. Some of the things he did this year with the Milwaukee club and which attracted so many bids for his services were:

1. Scored 115 runs, thus leading the league.
2. Hit safely in twenty-three consecutive games.
3. During his hitting streak he set a pace of .510.
4. Is now batting over .400.

QUESTION TWO TO DETERMINE OWNER OF LIQUOR FOUND

Four persons suspected of knowledge of which their number was responsible for the possession of three cases of home brew and two bottles of wine confiscated in a raid on the home of the grandmother of Julia Jones, colored, Cedarville, Saturday night, are the objects of surveillance by authorities.

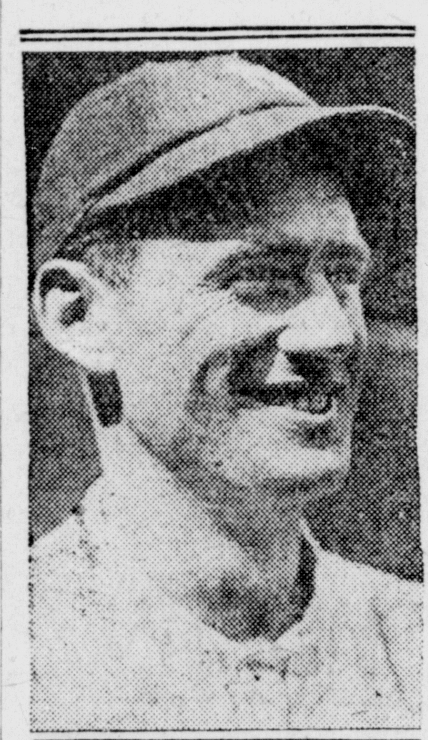

The grandmother and a son, Harry, were arrested by Deputy Sheriff John Baughn and appeared before Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Monday for questioning. They are not being held in jail but are still technically under arrest pending the outcome of a further investigation into the case.

Authorities are searching for Julia Jones and her sister to question them.

The law reads, officers say, that the head of a household is responsible for liquor found in their home.

Deputy Sheriff Baughn, assisted by three other officers, used an ax to break the lock on a door and gain entrance to a back room in the Jones' home where the beverage was found.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly. For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875. —Adv.

WHEREAS, the City Commission of the City of Xenia, Ohio, has heretofore by resolution duly passed on the 14th day of May, 1926, declared the necessity of improving Walnut Street from Elm Street to Bellbrook Avenue by laying of water mains, and of levying a special assessment upon the property abutting on said street to pay for said improvement, all in strict conformity to law, and

The Laugh that Circles the Globe

Secrets of the Mirth Caused by Jiggs and Maggie as Revealed by Their Creator, and How They Have Invaded Foreign Lands

"HOLD STILL!" Mary Pickford, in a Frankish Mood, Measuring George McManus's Moustache to Decide a Bet at "Pickfair," Her Hollywood Home, While Douglas Fairbanks Smiles in Mock Contemptuous Jealousy.

The following story about George McManus, portrayer of "Bringing Up Father," is published through permission of World Traveler, in which Jiggs and Maggie were just recently given the official designation—"globe trotters."

By LLEWELLYN REES JONES

TRAVEL is a broadening influence. Every one knows that. But it still may be news to some people that travel, which broadens a mere human being, also can broaden such an exalted character as the hero of a comic strip. Travel has done a great deal for Jiggs and Maggie, of "Bringing Up Father," upon no less authority than that of their creator, George McManus. Incidentally, the travels of Jiggs and Maggie have done a great deal for Mr. McManus, a statement which any interested person may verify through inquiry at the nearest commercial agency.

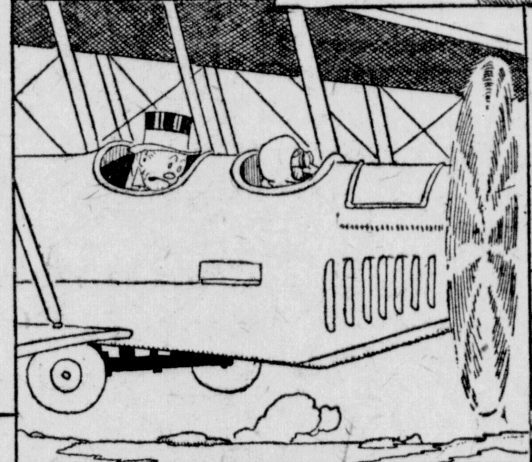

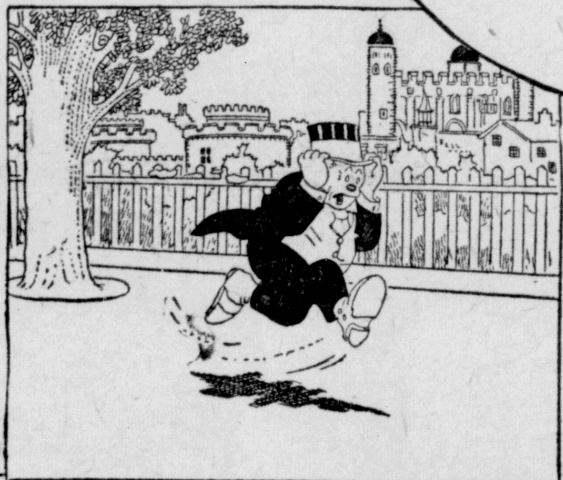

Travel, Mr. McManus confesses, has been responsible for his and their success. Mr. McManus took them into so many lands with pen and paint-brush that now they are able to travel on their own, as befits the two most distinguished linguists of the comic sections. For, in addition to the universal language of the rolling pin, the swift kick and the sock on the nose, they speak, through the papers in which they appear, German, Italian, Yiddish, Polish, several Slavic languages, Dutch, Spanish, Hungarian, Japanese, Chinese—virtually every language of the civilized world, "including the Scandinavian."

It is the tendency of Jiggs and Maggie to travel further afield each year which causes Mr. McManus most of his troubles. "Hey!" yelled his syndicate editor only the other day, "don't crack any more Fourth of July jokes. We are sending 'Bringing Up Father' to the Chinese papers now, and your Chinese readers will think the firecrackers mean 'Happy New Year.'"

As the reading public of each additional nation is introduced to Jiggs and Maggie, Mr. McManus must make pictures more universal in their appeal. Gone are the days when a comic character could celebrate Christmas, St. Patrick's Day and Washington's Birthday just like any other person. A Christmas joke does not mean a great deal in Japan, the German reading public is not keenly interested in March 17th, and Washington's Birthday is not yet a public holiday in Buenos Aires. It literally required an earthquake to make corned beef and cabbage universal. When Jiggs and Maggie first went to Japan, it was necessary for that delectable dish to be changed to gemai. Then came the earthquake. American food was rushed to Japan, and among the American foodstuffs was corned beef. Now Jiggs sneaks down to Dinty Moore's for corned beef and cabbage in Tokyo just as he does in Chicago.

But it was last Christmas when the wide travels of "Bringing Up Father" received their most striking demonstration. Among the presents which came to Mr. McManus was a silk rug, in which had been woven by Abdul Hamid Keshany, perhaps the greatest of Persian rugmakers, the various characters from the McManus comic strip. The rug had been made at the order of Ahmad Khan, a Persian art connoisseur and collector, who had been educated in England, and who in Teheran had picked up a copy of the China Press of Shanghai, containing a "Bringing Up Father" strip. He wrote a letter to Mr. McManus. A year later they met in Paris, and Mr. McManus gave him some of his original drawings, one of which became "copy" for the rug. Probably the happiest moment in the life of Mr. McManus came, however, when his work was first published in the Dublin Freeman. Jiggs, you know, was a Dublin Irishman. So, probably, were the McManus's three or four generations ago. It was by the origination of "Bringing Up Father" that Mr. McManus gained his chief fame and virtually all of his fortune. That was in 1912, and, contrary to a general impression, Jiggs did not have a counterpart in real life. Rather he was a composite of several Irish types, with the strongest elements in his personality being contributed by Billy Barry, an Irish actor of three decades ago, whom McManus had seen frequently at the Grand Opera House in St. Louis, then managed by his father.

Mr. McManus is a short, sturdy person with eyes and a nose that are unmistakably Irish. Moreover, he has a charming way of laughing at the other man's joke. He lives in New York and spends most of his time in the city, making an occasional trip to Europe or across America by way of vacation. Most of his work he does in a studio in New York. It is not un-appear. When they are completed and master engravings have been made for the English-language press, they are turned over to the foreign-language men. A Spanish-speaking journalist translates the McManus "balloons" into Spanish and Spanish engravings are made. Then they are translated for the Chinese papers, and so on.

gagn to sell bricks on a commission. Then he went into the brickmaking business and manufactured a brick especially designed for throwing purposes. It was much harder than the ordinary building brick and sold the year around.

Then Maggie became a social climber. Wealth changed her viewpoint. Society, dukes, counts and college professors came into her life. She forgot the old crowd. But Jiggs has stuck to his clay pipe and his corned beef and cabbage. He is still

ers. It is estimated that the newspapers throughout the world which print "Bringing Up Father" have a combined circulation of six million copies a day. The cartoons have appeared in nine books, and for most of the fourteen years since its creation, shows bearing the title have toured the country. Last season there were no less than five of these organizations on the road.

Regarding the unusual and lasting popularity of his creation Mr. McManus himself says:

"It is quite possible that Jiggs has remained in favor because he has always been such a vivid person to me that I never have felt that I was stale when I was at my work. When I first imagined as good as any other man in Dinty Moore's and willing to prove it. But Maggie is going to make a gentleman of Jiggs if she breaks every Ming vase in America doing it. So Maggie continues to lead her own life and Jiggs continues to lead what he can of his.

"Jiggs, of course, always wears the same clothing, but Maggie is always dressed in the height of style. I will wager that I buy more fashion magazines than any other man in America, just so Maggie may have new gowns. If she goes out in society, I have to go along, so that I will know what a ballroom looks like. Jiggs doesn't cause me any such trouble. I know ALL ABOUT the places where he goes."

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

ROSILYN RIDGEWAY learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an over-worked little drudge in her father's inn.

LANDIS RIDGEWAY, her husband is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother.

FLORENCE RIDGEWAY, an aristocratic old lady, who saw poverty staring her in the face, and chose the easiest way out. Rosilyn loving her husband, knows that he is still in love with Lydia Harbrook, a beautiful, cold society girl who is bent on marrying.

STEVIE VAN VORST, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Ridgeway, she is in Paris when the news reaches her of Landis' marriage and she hastens back to the United States. With her goes Rupert Briscoe, a dissipated man of the world, who has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia learns of this interest, and when the two reach New York, she suggests that they ask the young Ridgeways to dinner. She and Briscoe concoct a plot whereby through an apparent misunderstanding Rosilyn and Briscoe will be left alone together, while she will be with her beloved Landis.

Landis, finding himself alone with Lydia falls under her spell once more. Some hours later that evening, Rosilyn who is bewildered to find herself spending the evening in the company of Rupert Briscoe, sees her husband dancing with Lydia—in his eyes a look of rapture. She believes he has seen her but is too rude—or ashamed—to speak. Briscoe asks her to go on to a night club, and in a mood of recklessness she consents.

In Paris Van Vorst, realizing the reason for Lydia's sudden trip to America and hungering for her love, decides to use Marietta, a dancer and sweetheart of Briscoe's in connection with a plan. These two arrange to come to New York where Marietta is to vamp Landis away from Lydia, leaving a clear field for the elderly schemer.

Landis continues philandering with Lydia while Rosilyn to help forget the pangs of jealousy, allows Briscoe to pay her more flattering attention. The next day the latter drives her to the station where she is to meet her husband before they leave for their country home.

Upon arrival at their destination Landis shamefacedly confesses his admiration for Rosilyn and his own unworthiness, also suggesting that each might find it wiser to pursue a different course.

Soon after, Landis meets Lydia and while riding with her refuses to comment whether or not his wife "goes her own way," as he quite evidently does.

Deciding to attend a meeting at the race track they are astounded to see Stevie Van Vorst, with another woman. The latter pair does not at first recognize them in the crowd.

Van Vorst and his companion rush over, introductions are completed and Landis realizes that the other woman is the dancing girl, Marietta. According to the latter's scheme she flirts with Landis while Stevie does his best to intrigue Lydia, not too pleased at the turn of affairs and who becomes furious when a sudden shower ruins her frock. Deciding to leave immediately, she steps into Landis' car.

Back in town the four attend a supper club and while there all agree to meet on the morrow on Van Vorst's expensive yacht for a lavish party. Burning with jealousy, Lydia is coerced into accepting.

CHAPTER 48
DREAMS OF LOVE
Through the open windows of young Mrs. Landis Ridgeway's bedroom at Royal Cliff blew fresh and fragrant morning breezes. Scent of wild flowers mingled with the "tang" of the sea, and the sun made great splashes on the pretty pink-and-whiteness of the apartment.

It was a simple room—"quite a la jeune fille," as the bride's mother-in-law described it—and it suited Rosilyn.

Perhaps it was the only chamber in the whole big mansion that had been furnished and decorated entirely according to her own simple taste.

Rosilyn loved that room of hers. It was her own particular retreat—that, and the wind-swept cliffs.

She would roam those cliffs for hours, perched between sea and sky. There, in the midst of infinitude, and gazing far out over the tossing water her own troubles would seem somehow lessened, and a certain peace would steal into her heart.

Then she would retrace her steps to where the cliffs shelved gradually downward to sea level, and a dandy little bay was reached. It was a pretty spot, and Rosilyn would lie out in the sunshine, dreaming—or hunting for quaint little shells—of dabbling in the sea-pools that the tide left among the rocks.

This was the point nearest to Royal Cliff, and a path led from the grounds down to a boat-house now being painted, too, for soon a "house warming" was to be given in honor of the renovation of the old place, and the installation of its new mistress.

Rosilyn dreaded this event. Landis' gay friends—how could she cope with them?

And Lydia Harbrook! There was a Spanish dancing girl as well, with whom rumor had coupled her husband, and his mother was disturbed. Several of the gossips had already dropped a hint or two in the bride's ear.

But she was much too proud to show her hurt.

On this fragrant morning, when the breezes woke her, she came back to earth with a sense of happiness and buoyancy.

She rose and dressed and breakfasted, and made herself so pleasant to Mrs. Ridgeway Senior, (who if the truth be told, was beginning to be seriously uneasy over Landis' prolonged absences from his wife's side) that that good lady's heart was really touched.

"I'm afraid its dull for a child like you down here alone," she said. "An old woman like me isn't much company. Once the decorators and painters are finished, we must fill the house with young company. You'll like that, Rosilyn?"

"I don't know if I shall. I—I am quite happy," the bride had prevaricated.

Landis had been many days gone. If only he had written.

Not that he wasn't interested in the renovating of the house. He loved every stic and stone of the old place, and had taken the keenest interest in the work, spending hours with foremen and advisers.

But now that the business was nearly finished, he was off to fresh fields and pastures. That meant Lydia Harbrook. Rosilyn's heart contracted at the thought.

Shortly after breakfast, she contrived to slip off alone along the cliffs. What an enchanted summer morning! Butterflies darted among the little wild-flowers that spangled the green grass in clumps of yellow and of mauve and pink.

On, on she walked, dreaming of happiness that, like a will-o-the-wisp, was somewhere farther along the road of life—that magic happiness and utter peace that all souls crave.

The scenery grew wilder, more romantic. Rosilyn rested in the warm sunshine. She loved the feel of it on her bare arms and unshaded face.

"I must have gypsy blood in me," she said.

After a time she went on further till presently she saw—lying behind a gorse-bush—the recumbent figure of a man. He was quite some distance from her, and appeared to be sleeping, and as she drew a little nearer, she saw, with a start of astonishment, and nervousness, that the portion of his jaw and face which appeared below a hat tilted well down to keep the sun off, was uncommonly like Mr. Briscoe, and so was the figure, though he was not nearly so smartly dressed.

Bishop of London to Visit America

"It can't be he!" She drew away as softly as possible, afraid that the slumberer might wake. It was lonely in this spot and Mrs. Ridgeway had already censured her for these solitary ramblings. She retraced her steps.

If it were really Mr. Briscoe, why was he in the neighborhood? And why so far from any road or any sign of habitation?

He had had an unkempt air, almost as though he had spent the whole night out-of-doors, beside that bush!

But that, of course, was too absurd. Mr. Briscoe was a sybarite for comfort, and a man of means.

It wasn't possible that he had come down here like this, without his car and chauffeur for the purpose of spying on her? The young girl shivered at the thought.

It wasn't possible that he was in league with the Harbrook woman, to come here and make mischief between herself and Landis?

She looked fearfully over her shoulder, but a slight rising of the ground hid the neighborhood behind from her. The bush and its sleeping tenant was now out of sight.

Thinking she heard a step as though someone were following, she broke into a frightened run. She ran blindly, frantically, and at topmost speed, racing over the uneven ground.

And then, before she realized it, she was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."—Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

ARREST MADE IN MELLETT MURDER

SENATOR FESS WILL OPEN OHIO CAMPAIGN

WILL GIVE KEYNOTE
ADDRESS AUGUST 24
AT COLUMBUS MEET

Visited By Willis Monday—Xenians Are Among Greeters

United States Senator Simon D. Fess, Yellow Springs, is the choice of Senator Frank B. Willis, candidate for re-election, and Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, gubernatorial candidate for governor, to deliver the keynote address at the Republican platform convention at Columbus, August 24, it became known Monday.

Senator Fess was told of his development by Senator Willis at a conference between the two senators at the former's home in Yellow Springs Monday.

Cooper and Willis are said to have come to the conclusion that the Ohio senator was the logical man to define the issues upon which Ohio Republican candidates will seek election in the fall campaign at a joint conference in Cincinnati Sunday.

It was pointed out, however, that the formal invitation is subject to the decision of the Republican state committee.

The Ohio campaign assumed almost national importance and gives indication of having a great bearing on the presidential contest in 1928 with the added announcement Senator Willis expects to visit the Pine camp in the Adirondack mountains for a conference with President Coolidge before the opening of the Ohio campaign.

Victories for Senator Willis and Myers Cooper in November may shadow the result of the presidential election. Cooper is scheduled to come to Yellow Springs this week to confer with Senator Willis.

Senator Willis has outlined a plan for next week that will keep him busy until the opening of the Republican platform convention at Columbus, August 24.

Will address a veterans' rally at Cadiz Tuesday and talk with farmers' picnic, Wednesday evening.

He is scheduled to give a talk before the Business League in Cleveland August 19 he will address a meeting of the American Legion in Prospect, Marion County, will spend August 20 in Columbus office and August 21 will travel to Cincinnati to the Blaine Club by special train.

He is scheduled to give a veterans' reunion at Ashtabula, Coshocton County, Tuesday.

He will wind up at the state convention August 23.

Senator Fess will also be busy during the next few days, addressing the Rotary Club in Xenia Tuesday night.

At 6 o'clock, Tuesday night, he will address the Elks Club through special arrangement.

Friday night he will appear in Springfield to talk at the closing of the Wittenberg College summer school.

Following the summer convention next week, he assumes his duties with the state campaign committee which he is vice chairman.

Accompanying Senator Willis to Fess home were his wife and daughter, Helen. Senator Fess has open house and many residents of the vicinity including a number of Xenians had the pleasure of meeting the Republican candidate and his family.

Coolidge Says Government Has No Authority To Interfere—Continue To Investigate Military Coup

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The United States Government cannot interfere in the church and state controversy in Mexico, President Coolidge declared today.

His spokesman declared unconditionally that under no law did this government have authority to interest itself in such purely domestic problems. Only one complaint of seizure of American property has been made to the state department.

Mr. Coolidge's spokesman said and the Mexican government has promised to make immediate adjustment of that one case.

The administration will certify, however, the spokesman declared, that this government, will do what it can to have claims collected.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 17.—Anticipating the discovery of further supplies and munitions believed to have been intended for use by Mexican plotters under General Enrique Estrada, under arrest here, American and Mexican authorities prepared today for joint investigation into a frustrated military coup said to have threatened northern districts of Mexico.

Mexican officials, meeting here for the prosecution of the alleged intrigue, acclaimed American intervention as having saved Mexico, Mexican state, and the northern districts of Lower California from conquest.

At the same time American authorities announced they expected further uncovering of war materials designed to be employed in an insurgent movement.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17.—American tourists arriving here said that when they crossed the border immigration and revenue authorities lifted up seats in cars, took down berths and sounded horns searching for arms and ammunition.

The arrest of a group of Mexican plotters at San Diego has created excitement in official and Catholic circles, although the government has not yet made any official statement about the arrests.

It is known, however, that the government was pleased by the action of American officials.

The Episcopate has issued a statement saying that archbishop Mora has prohibited the faithful from entering churches in Meriba, Yucatan where the municipal authorities appointed communists.

LILLIAN CANNON IS FORCED TO ABANDON CHANNEL ATTEMPT

Baltimore Girl Is Disappointed Due To Storm

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, Aug. 1.—Battered by a terrific storm Miss Lillian Cannon of Baltimore was forced to abandon an attempt to swim the English channel early today after she had been in the water two and a half hours, fighting her way toward the English shore. Starting at 12:55 a. m. Miss Cannon was forced to give up the effort at 3:25 a. m.

Bitterly disappointed the American girl still voiced determination to seek again to conquer the channel after the unsuccessful conclusion of her brave attempt.

"I am ready to try again this season," she said.

The American girl had made good progress at the get away and at 2:15, was 3 miles off shore. There she found heavy seas running. Then the storm broke, old sea men here described it as the most violent electrical storm in years. Strong winds swept over darkened waters and threw up great white capped waves which raced out of the night. Torrential rain fell accompanied by thunder and lightning and stinging hail came on windy gusts. The wind blew the escort tug from its course, sweeping it rapidly toward Calais. It was impossible to keep near the swimmer.

Miss Cannon still fought on through the waves and storm.

The captain of the tug at first declared he was afraid to continue, and then that it was impossible to continue. All on the craft urged Miss Cannon to come aboard. It was not until after she had struggled in the stormy waters for more than an hour after the storm broke that she finally agreed to give up. She had covered three and one half miles.

The start had been made in a calm sea, although a slight rain was falling. Two waves were unusually warm and conditions were considered most favorable.

COUPLE UP IN AIR ON WEDDING DAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Glimmering years spent in the study of aeronautics and their application to modern life, Dr. Harry C. McKeown, a professor at the University of Pittsburgh, and Miss Ruth I. Hord, teacher at the Phillips High School, Birmingham, Ala., will be married today 4,000 feet above Broadway.

Aviator's toga will displace formal dress in the wedding above the clouds. The Rev. Leslie J. Barnett, of the Morningstar Presbyterian Church, has consented to act as sky-pilot. With pilot McMullen in charge of the plane, the party will take off from the Curtiss aerodrome field at Garden City at 2:30 o'clock. Dr. McKeown was a lieutenant in aviation during the war and has seen considerable flying. Dropping back to Garden City after the ceremony, the couple will leave for Bermuda for their honeymoon.

He declared his purpose was to learn whether the cloak and scarf were blood stained and as far as he could learn they were not.

The clothing had been a source of much controversy.

Opening of today's session of the hearing which was attended by some 400 men, women and girls, who had gathered around the court house as early as 7:30 a. m. to gain seats, was delayed half an hour by mysterious conferences between attorneys and the court. Testimony started without any developments from the conferences being announced however.

Stevens and Carpenter came to their seats within the rail, accompanied by officers, Carpenter serious and Stevens appearing bewildered as usual.

"Stevens looks like a man who has just been the victim of a loaded cigar and is trying to decide whether to laugh or become angry," one follower of the trial said.

There was the accustomed craning of necks in the courtroom as the two were led in. The day was exceedingly hot. Men sat hot and perspiring and the women fanned themselves with papers.

Many witnesses were present but there were no indications as to what would prove of interest. Mrs. Hall who with Stevens her brother and Carpenter, her cousin, is held on the murder charges, was not present. She remained at home, as she did during yesterday's session.

After adjournment of the first grand jury a special jury was called to investigate the McSwiggin murder and election frauds. That was the June special session. The grand jury investigated election frauds and the murder. Forty indictments were framed.

PRESENT EVIDENCE ON RESPONSIBILITY IN HALL-MILLS CASE

Hundreds Gather In Court Room—Mrs. Hall Absent

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 17.—A hearing to determine whether Willie Stevens, eccentric, and Henry De La Bruyere Carpenter, Wall Street broker, should be held for complicity in the famous Hall-Mills murder case, opened today with Mrs. Hall's tan coat the center of interest.

Charles Collins, detective, was the opening witness. He told of having traced to Philadelphia, the tan cloak and scarf which Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall had sent to a dyeing establishment there immediately after the murder of Rev. Edward W. Hall, her husband.

He declared his purpose was to learn whether the cloak and scarf were blood stained and as far as he could learn they were not.

THREE OHIOANS DIE WHEN AUTOMOBILES WRECKED IN STATE

Seven Passengers Injured In Same Accidents

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—Automobile wrecks claimed the lives of three Ohioans yesterday.

Cecil Speaker, 22, of Hudson, a student at Western Reserve University was killed when his automobile went into a ditch near Hudson. William Hockins, 25, his companion, was seriously injured. It was believed Speaker fell asleep at the wheel.

Mrs. George Gardner suffered a broken neck from which she died and N. S. Gardner and daughter, Olive, were injured when their automobile overturned near Gallop.

Robert Johnson, 22, of Fayetteville, was killed last night when his automobile was knocked from the road by another machine. Two companions were slightly injured as were two occupants of the other automobile.

The first actual murder charge in the now famous case was dramatic. All the principal investigators were present in the little office of the justice of the peace. Most of them had been in Cleveland during the day and Justice Correll waited late into the night for their return.

When all were assembled the murder warrant was issued. Then Roach made his statement charging ten others with complicity, charges that respected police officials played a part in the shooting from ambush of the young editor, because he was waging a newspaper campaign against lawlessness.

Mazer first came under suspicion because he was one of the group whom Mellett's campaign was affecting.

MINERS PROTEST BALDWIN MESSAGE

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Premier Baldwin's recent signed statement to the United Press was condemned today by the delegate conference on miners in session here.

In a resolution protesting against the statement, the miners said "it affords evidence that the government definitely has decided to assist the mine owners to defeat the miners by starvation."

The premier's statement dealt especially with food and related conditions in the mine areas. There was no starvation, Baldwin wrote; huge sums were being expended in poor relief, and close watch was being kept on the health of women and children of miners.

HUGE BUSINESS IN 1926 IS REPORTED

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Domestic business for 1926 will exceed the $100,000,000 mark it was predicted in a report made public today by the Central division of the National Association of Credit Men.

The report said business conditions are sound and that the amount of business will be extremely large.

It said production and production of other basic commodities a high peak has been maintained even in the summer months. The bank clearings for the year will exceed the clearings of the past year.

Commercial failures, while showing a small difference in number as compared with last year, yet show a substantial decrease in liabilities," the report said.

REWARD FOR BODY

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 17.—A reward of $100 was offered for recovery of the body of Harry J. Fruth, 25, drowned in the Maumee River, near Defiance, Sunday by the Holgate Masonic lodge and members of the Fruth family.

HABITUE OF CANTON UNDERWORLD NAMED IN MURDER WARRANT

Drug Fiend Promises To Confess Part In Slaying

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17. Louis Mazer, Canton underworld habitue charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, is ready to "spill everything" to satisfy his appetite for narcotics, according to reports today from the county jail where he is held.

"Give me one pill and I'll spill everything," Mazer pleaded following a night of confinement, it was learned from one of his jailers, a deputy sheriff.

County jail authorities under orders of federal officers who arrested Mazer yesterday on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law before the murder warrant was sworn out, refused him drugs.

Mazer is a known addict. This morning, according to authorities he was in a frenzy, ready to do anything for relief from drug starvation.

Also at the county jail was Mazer's associate, Carl Studer, charged with liquor law violation and held in default of bond. He will remain here unless bail is forthcoming, but Mazer will be returned to Canton.

Before Mazer is taken back to face the murder charge, however, he will be confronted with Steve Koscholk, the witness who has identified his photograph as that of a man who took him from Massillon to Canton when the plans were being made to "gun" the young Canton publisher for interfering with the bootlegging business.

Investigators from Canton will also see him at request of U. S. District Attorney A. E. Berstein, who is conducting a federal investigation of alleged bootlegging activities at Canton on the theory they played a part in Mellett's murder.

In a statement by Joseph Roach, Chicago criminal prosecutor immediately after justice of peace Bruce Correll issued the warrant, it was explained that Mazer was arrested on evidence gathered by Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective and his assistant, George Armstrong.

Roach also said at least ten others are involved in the murder among them several members of the police department. Warrants for further arrests are expected.

The first murder charge was based on an affidavit sworn out by Michael Glenn, one of Roach's assistants.

SECTION 5. In the event any of the owners of said property so specially assessed shall pay their total assessments in cash within thirty days of the date of the final passage of the ordinance levying such special assessments the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued shall be reduced by deducting the amount so paid in cash from the total amount of the bonds to be issued, and the bonds herein provided for first maturing shall be correspondingly reduced by the omission of so many thereof as shall equal the amount of assessments so paid, or by changing the denomination of one of said bonds, or both, as the case may be, and the amount to be credited to the foregoing fund from the sale of said bonds shall be likewise reduced by the amount of the assessments so paid in cash for such improvement.

SECTION 7. That the faith, revenue and credit of the City of Xenia, Ohio, are hereby pledged to the prompt payment of both the principal and interest of the bonds hereinbefore described in accordance with the laws and Constitution of the State of Ohio.

Provided, however, that in each year that the assessments anticipated by said bonds are payable and are applicable to the payment of such interest and principal and are appropriated for such purpose, the amount of such tax shall be reduced by the amount of the assessment so appropriated.

That said tax shall be and is hereby ordered computed, certified, levied and extended upon the tax duplicate and collected by the same officers, in the same manner and at the same time that the taxes for general purposes for each of said years are certified, extended and collected. Said tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof. C. A. KELBLE CELEBRATES HIS 39TH BUSINESS ANNIVERSARY

For thirty-nine years Charles A. Kelble, W. Main St. merchant, has been in business in Xenia.

This unusual record was made public Tuesday when Mr. Kelble announced the thirty-ninth anniversary of his merchandising career. He began in business August 17, 1887 and although he has occupied four different locations in that time, he has always been in business on W. Main St., between Detroit and King Sts.

Mr. Kelble's first store was in a small room in a frame building where the building occupied by the Famous Auto Supply Co., is now located. He later moved his business to the double rooms now used by the Jacob Hyman fruit market and the Anderson Grocery, at Main and King Sts. Later it was moved across the street to the building now occupied by the F. B. Scott tinning shop and thirteen years ago it was moved to its present location, 17 and 19 W. Main St.

Mr. Kelble was nineteen years of age when he started in business, and with him, it has grown to what is now one of the largest stores of its kind in Greene County, carrying a large stock of men's and boys' clothing and furnishings and women's, misses', children's, men's and boys' footwear.

In recent years Mr. Kelble has given much attention to civic affairs and has been active in movements designed to improve Xenia. It is believed that Mr. Kelble has built more modern homes than any other man in the city. He was, at one time, president of the Chamber of Commerce, is a charter member of the Kiwanis Club, and is now serving as a member of the City Commission and is always pleased to align himself with the boosters of civic affairs.

"I have never stopped advertising in the Gazette one week in the thirty-nine years" Mr. Kelble said Tuesday. "I have paid the Gazette

C. A. KELBLE
In that time more than $40,000 for advertising and consider it the best money I ever spent. I give the Gazette advertising the credit for a part of my success in business and if I were in business thirty-nine years longer, I would continue to advertise in the Gazette."

MILES WOMEN WALK PREPARING MEALS HAVE BEEN MEASURED

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 17.—Kitchen shortcuts to cut down mileage of the housewife preparing meals or baking a cake may be mapped out by the San Joaquin Farm Bureau home department which is now making a survey, through the use of pedometers, in hopes of increasing efficiency in farm homes.

So far pedometer readings have revealed many interesting things. For instance, one woman walked one and three-quarters miles to get breakfast, while a neighbor, preparing breakfast for the same number of people walked only one-fourth mile. Arrangement of kitchen equipment has much to do with the difference.

Fifteen reports have been submitted to the survey board. One woman walked one-quarter mile getting breakfast, one-quarter mile getting lunch and one mile preparing dinner. Another woman walked one and three-quarters miles getting breakfast, three-quarters of a mile getting lunch and one and one-quarter miles preparing dinner.

The pedometer was not large enough to register the mileage of one woman who was baking a cake, one of the reports said.

EIGHT OUNCES OF CLOTHES ENOUGH FOR FLAPPER

In 185 the blushing debutante was concealed beneath some fifteen pounds of cloth.

Xenia girls are doing their best to follow the dictates of Paris fashion and peel off their clothes until they weigh no more than eight ounces.

The "hour-glass" shape of 1900 was obtained only by the addition of plenty of garments.

According to authorities this statement was originally intended to include shoes, but a few actual weight experiments proved that this was practically impossible, despite the paste-board quality of most of the modern feminine pedal adornments. So it was decided to exclude shoes and to leave the poor woman trying in vain to reconcile eight ounces with the laws of her land.

Now Miss 1926 has her garments down to eight ounces, and still she isn't satisfied.

A silk-one-piece undergarment usually a teddy-bear or a close cousin, a pair of chiffon hose and a straight-line silk frock make up the absolute maximum of wearable garments under the new ruling. Simple, very simple.

Estimates of the number of pounds that the grand old ladies of a few decades ago wore were hard to get from Xenia women, fashionably attired in that period. Few like to admit that within their memory the sweet things wore as much as five pounds. But a few intrepid souls of years that would indicate authoritative knowledge on the subject hazarded a guess that went as high as fifteen pounds.

Estimates for the lady of 1875 were few, but all agreed that fifteen pounds was a conservative guess. Yards and yards of cloth went into every gown and every gown had its matching petticoats, and underskirts, each boasting more yards of material. Then came the undergarments, drawers with innumerable ruffles and frills and chemises with pads and laces. That almost extinct contraption, the corset came in for its full share of recognition on the scales.

The batting average of the 1900's was a little less because of the more general adoption of silk, which was much lighter than the challoes and flannels of a quarter of a century earlier. The vogue of the extremely narrow waist at this time also reduced the weight although it was almost negated by the padding used to acquire the delicious curves that bulged above the waist in front and below the waist in back.

And now Miss Xenia of 1926

comes tripping along in eight ounces. 1950? Well, we are not prophesying. We are just hoping we will live that long.

"SWEEP UP THE GLASS, PLEASE"

The Connecticut highway department has asked motorists who have been involved in collisions to "sweep up the glass, please."

It is a reasonable request.

The average motorist who has been in an accident of this kind, and survived, considers that all he has to do for the next thirty or forty minutes, or maybe an hour or two, is to argue and jot down license numbers in a notebook. He forgets about the traffic. He ignores the hooting horns of people who want to get by. He just spouts opinions, sarcasms and—in case the other fellow is not too big—very terrible threats. When he leaves, whether under his own power or that of the wrecker, the broken glass is left behind him.

We are gradually acquiring a code of manners to suit the motorized age. It is not considered proper, for instance, for a driver to take up more than four-fifths of the road. It is held to be illbred to turn a blind corner at faster than sixty miles an hour. The motorist's book of etiquette is a pretty thin volume, but it will expand as time goes on. It may come about that when two cars undertake to knock each other into the ditch and fail, that the drivers thereof will spring from their seats, grab up brooms and vigorously proceed to sweep up the glass—taking it home possibly for souvenirs of a pleasant fifteen minutes.

You can't tell. We live in a queer world.

MAKE THEM BUY IT

Of recent place in America news and pictures have been the American women presented at the British court. The chore of seeing that the ladies get into the presence and get by with their curtsies without offense to any part of the ritual is that of the wife of the American ambassador. It may be a nuisance or a pleasure to her, according to her disposition.

The trepidation and gratification of the successful candidates are complimentary to the caste system of society. The presentation gives an opportunity for a moment of self-abasement and a lifetime thereafter of self-exaltation, and that opportunity is so much thought of that Americans more than any other people clamor for it. Radical western congressmen threaten the ambassador with political consequences unless he gets the favor of their wives, daughters, sisters, cousins and aunts.

London dressmakers like it because it is profitable to make presentation dresses. The English people probably do not object to a bowing down in humility to their social system. Nothing much can be done about it except one thing. The United States officially can be taken out of it, and with the ambassador and his wife conducting the candidates' end of the affair, this government is officially in it.

HINDSIGHT IS COSTLY

A large percentage of community effort and wealth is employed without cessation in undoing the mistakes of the past and posterity will spend as much or more in correcting the mistakes of the present. Foresight and the courage and means to meet the needs of the future would end this tremendous economic waste.

Railroad men estimate it would cost $10,000,000,000 to eliminate all highway grade crossings in the United States. This is about half the original construction cost of the nation's entire system of railroad tracks.

When the railroads were built, labor, construction materials and land were cheap. And, then too, even disregarding the difference in building costs, it would have been cheaper to have constructed the railroads without grade crossings than to eliminate the crossings after the rails have been laid.

Government foresight and forward looking railroad builders would have saved this generation millions in taxes, removed the cause of thousands of fatal accidents and of that vast economic loss resulting from grade crossing accidents. But government statistics indicate that two new grade crossings are established to each one eliminated at great cost to the public.

Most of the country's railroad trackage was laid before the popularization of the automobile and motor truck, so the past can be forgiven its failure to build for future traffic needs. This defense is denied this generation.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Young Housewife: I have heard of some kind of boiled salad dressing which I could make inexpensively in a large quantity, and which will keep a week or so in my ice box. Could you give me the recipe?

Answer: The following recipe is just what you want. Double it for a large amount. Boiled Salad Dressing: Mix together in the upper part of a double boiler two tablespoons of granulated sugar, one tablespoon of flour, one beaten egg, one cup of cold, sweet milk, one and one-half teaspoons of dry mustard powder, one small teaspoon of salt and a piece of butter the size of a small egg. Place the pot over boiling water and stir till well heated, then add one-third cup of vinegar and continue to cook till thick. Now remove the mixture from the fire and beat smooth with an egg beater or the wheel type. Cool and chill before using. Keep in a preserve jar in the refrigerator.

THE CHILD WORLD

Little Janet wears a pout, Wonder what it's all about? Little David's chubby hand In her face was throwing sand. This beyond the slightest doubt Is good reason for a pout.

Something's wrong when boys will hurl Sand at such a little girl. David's mother says that he Promptly sent to bed shall be. Janet quite agrees he should, Maybe next time he'll be good.

"Wait," say I with sombre face, "Let's investigate the case. I don't understand What made David throw the sand."

David answers, "Well, you see Janet threw some sand at me."

Thus the world of childhood runs, Daughters throw at neighbors' sons Neighbors' sons return the sand. Then is warfare in the land. And when come the cry and tear Foolish parents interfere.

Friend, for this piece of information. I wonder how red ink would turn out, used in the same way? I may try it on some scraps of ragged paper!

Bride Elect: "Do I need a steel hand-chopper and wooden chopping bowl if I have one of the iron food grinders? I am trying to eliminate all unnecessary utensils from my kitchen-equipment list."

Answer: I believe you will find the hand-chopper and wood bowl equally as useful as the food grinder. The grinder, of course, has several wheel-knives, and thus will cut food fine or coarse. But with a hand-chopper you will get a clean cut, without any mashing, (in chopped-vegetable salads, for instance). The hand-chopper, too, is more easily cleaned than the grinder. Yet no kitchen is complete without the grinder.

Despite the economy measures in various studio organizations, there is on the way a long list of pictures costing from $500,000 to $1,500,000. Film men claim that the recent success of the $2 showings in large cities, coupled with the announcements of a $2 picture theater circuit, has spurred production of the larger films.

"Beau Geste" the Famous Players' special opening at the Criterion, New York, for a run at the $2 top week after next, is said to be a $800,000 production, while the other F. P. special for this season, "Old Ironsides," is claimed to have cost more than $1,500,000.

Metro now has "The Scarlet Letter," and "Mare Nostrum" currently playing at $2 top and each understood to around $750,000 in cost. "The Mysterious Island," next season special is budgeted by Metro to cost more than $800,000. Metro also has "The Trail of '98," scheduled as a $2 special, and made largely in Alaska, as a $4,000,000 proposition.

The John Barrymore series turned out by Warner probably rates between $750,000 and $1,000,000 in cost. "The Sea Beast" was expensive to make because of long delays on the whale episodes (finally completed through use of a rubber whale). "Don Juan" is another expensive production.

Four choristers in "The Girl Friend," at the Vanderbilt, New York, went on "strike" when called for an 11 o'clock morning rehearsal. They said the hour was unseemly. The four young men lost their jobs of course.

"The Illustrated Daily News," formerly owned by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has been sold to 5,940 of its stockholders for $1,001,971.62. The new company, L. Lasky, $15,000; and Douglas Fairbanks, $10,000.

Today's Talk

ON SEEING A TOWN

A great many people see a town in the same manner as they judge human beings—by riding over the surface.

The bus may show many beautiful and interesting places, but you don't know a town until you know the people who live in it and who have given of themselves to make it what it is.

To see a town, you must talk with those who live in it. I recently drove through an interesting town. I thought I had seen about all that was worth seeing, when I dropped into a little store and began talking to a young man who had lived in the town all his life. The town took upon double interest to me when I learned about the men and women who had made it and who had done so much to make it beautiful and useful.

I am not surprised that the inhabitants of a town fight for it as they do and defend it against bad rumors. For a town is a composite of all the people and personalities of those who work and sleep in it.

Before you see a town from the seat of a bus or wagon, take a little walk. Talk to the grocer man. Pick out an intelligent clerk in any store and engage him or her in conversation. Don't forget the photographer. He knows about people. Talk to the policeman, the newsboy, or the bell boy at your hotel.

You must get the picture and spirit of a town through those who walk around on its streets day after day.

It's so with people. You can't know them by forming your opinion from some one who doesn't know them, or who merely talked with them. You have to spend quite a spell in a person's heart before you know him.

East Side - West Side

—OF—

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

I had lunch the other day with a man who has overcome the handicap of having been born with a silver spoon in his mouth. The first twenty-five years of his life he was as useless as a broken safety razor blade. But he could balance a tea cup on his knee in the most approved manner. He played golf, tennis and ping pong with ease and proficiency. He married the daughter of another wealthy family. But his father-in-law was one of those gentlemen of the old school who believe every man should do something useful. He refused to contribute to the support of his son-in-law. He told his son-in-law to go to work. Furthermore, the old gentleman induced the boy's uncle who had kept the boy in luxury for a number of years, to deliver the same message to the young society man.

All of this made the young man mad. That was good for him. He decided he would go to work. He got a job driving a taxicab. Publicity followed and his people were embarrassed. They practically disowned him and refused to pay the bills—$28,000 "worth" of them—which the young man owed. Some of his old friends advised him to go through bankruptcy and thus be relieved of the responsibility of paying these. The young man bucked at this. He is inherently honest.

"No," he said. "I'll go to work at something that will pay well and work at it until all these debts are wiped out. The taxi business is 'out' from now on."

In a week he was working for a big insurance company. He studied the insurance business from every angle. He attended the school of salesmanship. He went at the business with the zest and determination of an eager scientist.

Today this former do-nothing is one of the best insurance salesmen in New York. In three years he has paid off more than $25,000 of the $28,000 he owed. He has self-confidence, self-respect. Furthermore, he has the respect of his father-in-law, his friends and best of all, his wife.

Harry Reichenbach, the highest salaried press-agent in the world, is proud of his Jewish ancestry. But he takes delight in poking fun at his own people. The other day he was being interviewed by a magazine writer.

"Do you speak any foreign languages?" the writer asked.

"French, German, a little Arabian and just enough Hebrew to get through the Astor Hotel lobby!" replied Harry.

The prettiest girl I know in New York is a waitress in one of the big eating places just off Broadway. She's a small town girl, she knows big town ways. In a city where the lecherous put a premium on pulchritude this girl goes smilingly on, turning a deaf ear to invitations to "wild parties," studio dinners (or suppers), visits to the roadhouses of Westchester County. She lives with her mother in a little up-town flat and there she entertains, charmingly, her small circle of friends. An apartment on Riverside Drive or Park Avenue could be hers for the asking. But she'll never live on either of those thoroughfares unless by some happy circumstance a man with brains as well as money is lucky enough to win her for a wife.

THE BEST POSSIBLE REASON FOR MISSING A TRAIN

By Jay V. Jay

Where is Mitzi? Two minutes to train time and Mitzi and the Goofy have not appeared. Everybody is explaining to everybody else just what must have happened when she enters cheerfully with the Goofy, looking guilty, tagging along. It isn't an elopement, is it? Not at all! Mitzi likes Dallas so much she simply had to buy a few things before she left. Such good shops! Polly and Aunt Sophia begin to cool off beneath their sheer coats which a moment ago seemed quite too heavy.

Mitzi wears a thin silk coat, too. It's the smartest thing for summer. Coats are of crepe, tulle, of georgette, of satin, of faille—none lined—and worn all times of the day and for all occasions. For travelling they are excellent. Not too warm, but warm enough.

What if she only succeeded in getting on the rear platform of the last car? She made it! She feels that the afternoon was a complete success what with these parcels and the silk hat which she bought in just a minute or two—not a second more!

YOUNG PLAYER MAY DISAPPOINT CLUBS THAT LET HIM SLIP

By CLARK B. KELSEY
CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—There is a young baseball player coming up into the big leagues next year with the St. Louis Browns who is certain to attract attention. If he "makes the grade," there are going to be about fifteen saddened, disappointed big league managers; and if he fails to make good, there'll be many a sigh of relief.

The young man in question is Fred Schulte, a hard slugging outfielder recently purchased by the Browns from the Milwaukee club of the American Association, for a price understood to be very nearly $125,000—the highest figure ever paid for a ball player by a St. Louis team. The deal was not entirely in cash, however, Pitchers Claude Jonnard and Charley Robertson and infielder Robert Lamotte going to Milwaukee in the transaction.

Schulte is reported to be the Browns' next spring and then it will be that all the other managers will start watching—because it is said virtually every club in both leagues was bidding for the young man.

Schulte is 22 years old and his home is at Belvidere, Ill. He plays well either in the outfield or infield but prefers to roam in the gardens. Some of the things he did this year with the Milwaukee club and which attracted so many bids for his services were:

1. Scored 115 runs, thus leading the league.
2. Hit safely in twenty-three consecutive games.
3. During his hitting streak he set a pace of .510.
4. Is now batting over .400.

RUSSELL BAILEY IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Russell Bailey, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey, Jamestown, died at his parents' home, Monday morning. Death was caused by Bright's disease.

The young man was employed at one of the Kroger stores in Springfield but was forced to return home three months ago on account of ill health. His condition rapidly became worse.

Besides his parents, one brother survives. Funeral services will be held Wednesday at the home.

Acid Stomach
"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.
For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875. —Adv.

ORDINANCE NO. 314

ORDINANCE NO. 314
TO ISSUE BONDS IN ANTICIPATION OF THE COLLECTION OF SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF WALNUT STREET FROM ELM STREET TO BELLBROOK AVENUE BY THE LAYING OF WATER MAINS.

WHEREAS, the City Commission of the City of Xenia, Ohio, has heretofore by resolution duly passed on the 14th day of May, 1925, declared the necessity of improving Walnut Street from Elm Street to Bellbrook Avenue by laying of water mains, and of levying a special assessment upon the property abutting on said street to pay for said improvement, all in strict conformity to law, and

WHEREAS, the City Auditor has certified to this Commission the estimated life of said improvement as in excess to ten years, and has certified the maximum maturity of said bonds hereinafter provided for as ten years, and

WHEREAS, this Commission estimates that a tax for said bonds will first appear on the duplicate for the tax year, 1926, and that the final tax settlement with the County Treasurer, next following the inclusion of a tax for this issue in the Annual Budget by the County Auditor, as provided by law, will be obtained not earlier than the first day of September, 1927, and will require $36.85 for interest until such taxes are collected and available;

Now, therefore, Be it ordained by the City Commission of the City of Xenia, State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. That for the purpose of raising money in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of Walnut Street from Elm Street to Bellbrook Avenue by the laying of water mains, bonds of said City shall be issued to the amount of seven hundred thirty-seven dollars, ($737.00).

SECTION 2. Said bonds shall be designated as the "Walnut Street Water Improvement bonds"; shall be in the denomination of one hundred fifty dollars, ($150.00), each, except the final bond shall be in the denomination of one hundred thirty-seven dollars, ($137.00); shall be dated not later than September 1st, 1926; shall draw interest at the rate of five (5%) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of March and September of each year, upon presentation and surrender of interest coupons to be attached to said bonds, bearing the facsimile signature of the Auditor, and shall be due and payable as follows:

Sept. 1st, 1927, No. 1, —$150.00
Sept. 1st, 1928, No. 2, —$150.00
Sept. 1st, 1929, No. 3, —$150.00
Sept. 1st, 1930, No. 4, —$150.00
Sept. 1st, 1931, No. 5, —$137.00

SECTION 3. Said bonds shall be prepared by the City Solicitor, shall be signed by the City Mayor and City Auditor, sealed with the City seal, and recorded in the office of the Sinking Fund Trustees; shall express upon their face the purpose for which they are issued, and the fact that they are issued pursuant to law, and this ordinance; shall be payable both principal and interest at the office of the Treasurer of the City of Xenia, Ohio; shall be issued and sold under direction of the City Commission, and shall bear consecutive numbers from one to five inclusive.

SECTION 4. That upon sale of said bonds, any premium and the accrued interest realized therefrom, shall be paid to the Sinking Fund Trustees. The par value realized from the sale of said bonds shall be placed in the city treasury to the credit of the Walnut Street improvement fund, and shall be disbursed from said fund on proper vouchers, in payment of the expense of the improvement aforesaid.

SECTION 5. In the event any of the owners of any of said property so specially assessed shall pay their total assessments in cash within thirty days of the date of the final passage of the ordinance levying such special assessments, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued shall be reduced by deducting the amount so paid in cash from the total amount of the bonds to be issued, and the bonds herein provided for shall be correspondingly reduced by the omission of so many thereof as shall equal the amount of assessments so paid, or by changing the denomination of one of said bonds, or both, as the case may be, and the amount to be credited to the foregoing fund from the sale of said bonds shall be likewise reduced by the amount of the assessments so paid in cash for such improvement.

SECTION 6. That all installments of said assessments and all portions thereof, together with interest thereon, shall be applied to the payment of said bonds and interest as the same shall become due, and to no other purpose whatsoever.

SECTION 7. That the faith, revenue and credit of the City of Xenia are hereby pledged for the prompt payment of both principal and interest on said bonds herebefore described in accordance with the laws and constitution of the State of Ohio.

SECTION 8. That the purpose of providing the necessary funds to pay the interest on the foregoing issue of bonds from the prompt payment of the same, and also to create and maintain a fund sufficient to discharge the said bonds at maturity, there shall be, and is hereby levied on all the taxable property of the City of Xenia, in addition to all other taxes, a direct tax annually during the period for which said bonds are to run in an amount sufficient to provide a fund for the discharge of the principal of said bonds at maturity, which tax shall not be less than the interest and sinking fund tax required by section 11 of the constitution.

SECTION 9. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

The Laugh that Circles the Globe

Secrets of the Mirth Caused by Jiggs and Maggie as Revealed by Their Creator, and How They Have Invaded Foreign Lands

"HOLD STILL!"

Mary Pickford, in a Frankish Mood, Measuring George McManus's Moustache to Decide a Bet at "Pickfair," Her Hollywood Home, While Douglas Fairbanks Smiles in Mock Contemptuous Jealousy.

The following story about George McManus, portrayer of "Bringing Up Father," is published through permission of World Traveler, in which Jiggs and Maggie were just recently given the official designation—"globe trotters."

By LLEWELLYN REES JONES

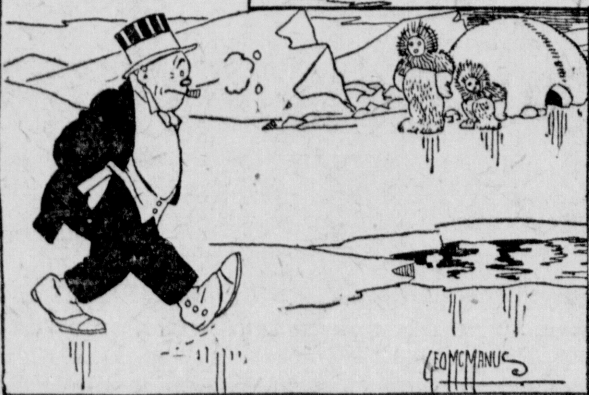

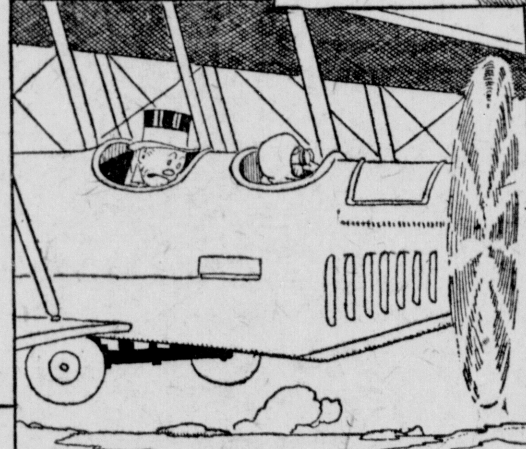

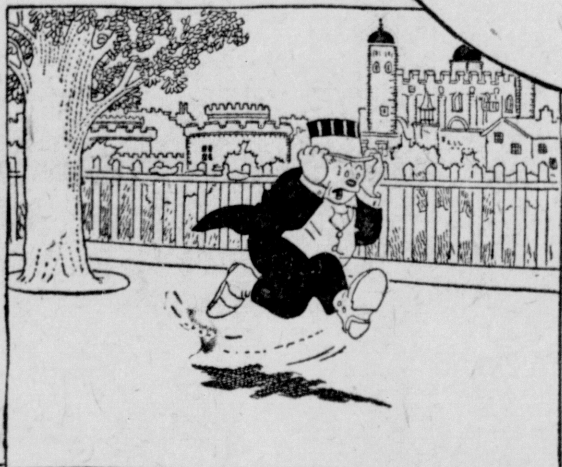

TRAVEL is a broadening influence. Every one knows that. But it still may be news to some people that travel, which broadens a mere human being, also can broaden such an exalted character as the hero of a comic strip. Travel has done a great deal for Jiggs and Maggie, of "Bringing Up Father," upon no less authority than that of their creator, George McManus. Incidentally, the travels of Jiggs and Maggie have done a great deal for Mr. McManus, a statement which any interested person may verify through inquiry at the nearest commercial agency.

Travel, Mr. McManus confesses, has been responsible for his and their success. Mr. McManus took them into so many lands with pen and paint-brush that now they are able to travel on their own, as befits the two most distinguished linguists of the comic sections. For, in addition to the universal language of the rolling pin, the swift kick and the sock on the nose, they speak, through the papers in which they appear, German, Italian, Yiddish, Polish, several Slavic languages, Dutch, Spanish, Hungarian, Japanese, Chinese—virtually every language of the civilized world, "including the Scandinavian."

It is the tendency of Jiggs and Maggie to travel further afield each year which causes Mr. McManus most of his troubles. "Hey!" yelled his syndicate editor only the other day, "don't crack any more Fourth of July jokes. We are sending 'Bringing Up Father' to the Chinese papers now, and your Chinese readers will think the firecrackers mean 'Happy New Year'!" As the reading public of each additional nation is introduced to Jiggs and Maggie, Mr. McManus must make pictures more universal in their appeal. Gone are the days when a comic character could celebrate Christmas, St. Patrick's Day and Washington's Birthday just like any other person. A Christmas joke does not mean a great deal in Japan, the German reading public is not keenly interested in March 17th, and Washington's Birthday is not yet a public holiday in Buenos Aires. It literally required an earthquake to make corned beef and cabbage universal. When Jiggs and Maggie first went to Japan, it was necessary for that delectable dish to be changed to gema. Then came the earthquake. American food was rushed to Japan, and among the American foodstuffs was corned beef. Now Jiggs sneaks down to Dinty Moore's for corned beef and cabbage in Tokyo just as he does in Chicago.

But it was last Christmas when the wide travels of "Bringing Up Father" received their most striking demonstration. Among the presents which came to Mr. McManus was a silk rug, in which had been woven by Abdul Hamid Keshany, perhaps the greatest of Persian rugmakers, the various characters from the McManus comic strip. The rug had been made at the order of Ahmad Khan, a Persian art connoisseur and collector, who had been educated in England, and who in Teheran had picked up a copy of the China Press of Shanghai, containing a "Bringing Up Father" strip. He wrote a letter to Mr. McManus. A year later they met in Paris, and Mr. McManus gave him some of his original drawings, one of which became "copy" for the rug. Probably the happiest moment in the life of Mr. McManus came, however, when his work was first published in the Dublin Freeman. Jiggs, you know, was a Dublin Irishman. So, probably, were the McManus's three or four generations ago. It was by the origination of "Bringing

Up Father" that Mr. McManus gained his chief fame and virtually all of his fortune. That was in 1912, and, contrary to a general impression, Jiggs did not have a counterpart in real life. Rather he was a composite of several Irish types, with the strongest elements in his personality being contributed by Billy Barry, an Irish actor of three decades ago, whom McManus had seen frequently at the Grand Opera House in St. Louis, then managed by his father.

Mr. McManus is a short, sturdy person with eyes and a nose that are unmistakably Irish. Moreover, he has a charming way of laughing at the other man's joke. He lives in New York and spends most of his time in the city, making an occasional trip to Europe or across America by way of vacation. Most of his work he does in a studio in New York. him, I made out a sort of mental biography of him, and that conception has not been changed in any important detail. He was born in Ireland, you know, and came to this country, expecting to find the streets paved with gold. But they were paved with bricks and cobblestones instead. So he became a hod-carrier. Romance came into his life when he met Maggie slinging dishes in a beanery, and they were married. Jiggs saved his money. He threw away the hod and he are completed and master engravings have been made for the English-language press, they are turned over to the foreign-language men. A Spanish-speaking journalist translates the McManus "balloons" into Spanish and Spanish engravings are made. Then they are translated for the Chinese papers, and so on.

When the foreign-language men have finished, "Bringing Up Father" is ready for more than 600 newspapers in all parts of the world and for several million readers. It is estimated that the newspapers throughout the world which print "Bringing Up Father" have a combined circulation of six million copies a day. The cartoons have appeared in nine books, and for most of the fourteen years since its creation, shows bearing the title have toured the country. Last season there were no less than five of these organizations on the road.

Regarding the unusual and lasting popularity of his creation Mr. McManus himself says:

"It is quite possible that Jiggs has remained in favor because he has always been such a vivid person to me that I never have felt that I was stale when I was at my work. When I first imagined as good as any other man in Dinty Moore's and willing to prove it. But Maggie is going to make a gentleman of Jiggs if she breaks every Ming vase in America doing it. So Maggie continues to lead her own life and Jiggs continues to lead what he can of his.

"Jiggs, of course, always wears the same clothing, but Maggie is always dressed in the height of style. I will wager that I buy more fashion magazines than any other man in America, just so Maggie may have new gowns. If she goes out in society, I have to go along, so that I will know what a ballroom looks like. Jiggs doesn't cause me any such trouble. I know ALL ABOUT the places where he goes."

The Gilded Rose

By May Christie

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

ROSILYN RIDGEWAY learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an over-worked little drudge in her father's inn.

LANDIS RIDGEWAY, her husband is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother.

FLORENCE RIDGEWAY, an aristocratic old lady, who saw poverty staring her in the face, and chose the easiest way out. Rosilyn loving her husband, knows that he is still in love with Lydia Harbrook, a beautiful, cold society girl who is bent on marrying.

STEVIE VAN VORST, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Ridgeway. She is in Paris when the news reaches her of Landis' marriage and she hastens back to the United States. With her goes Rupert Briscoe, a dissipated man of the world, who has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia learns of this interest, and when the two reach New York, she suggests that they ask the young Ridgeways to dinner.

She and Briscoe concoct a plot whereby through an apparent misunderstanding Rosilyn and Briscoe will be left alone together, while she will be with her beloved Landis.

Landis, finding himself alone with Lydia falls under her spell once more. Some hours later that evening, Rosilyn who is bewildered to find herself spending the evening in the company of Rupert Briscoe, sees her husband dancing with Lydia—in his eyes a look of rapture. She believes he has seen her but is too rude—or ashamed—to speak. Briscoe asks her to go on to a nightclub, and in a mood of recklessness she consents.

In Paris Van Vorst, realizing the reason for Lydia's sudden trip to America and hungering for her love, decides to use Marietta, a dancer and sweetheart of Briscoe's in connection with a plan. These two arrange to come to New York where Marietta is to vamp Landis away from Lydia, leaving a clear field for the elderly schemer.

Landis continues philandering with Lydia while Rosilyn tries to help forget the pangs of jealousy, allows Briscoe to pay her more flattering attention. The next day the latter drives her to the station where she is to meet her husband before they leave for their country home.

Upon arrival at their destination Landis shamefacedly confesses his admiration for Rosilyn and his own unworthiness, also suggesting that each might find it wiser to pursue a different course.

Soon after, Landis meets Lydia and while riding with her refuses to comment whether or not his wife "goes her own way," as he quite evidently does.

Deciding to attend a meeting at the race track they are astounded to see Steve Van Vorst, with another woman. The latter pair does not at first recognize them in the crowd.

Van Vorst and his companion rush over, introductions are completed and Landis realizes that the other woman is the dancing girl, Marietta. According to the latter's scheme she flirts with Landis while Steve does his best to intrigue Lydia, not too pleased at the turn of affairs and who becomes furious when a sudden shower ruins her frock. Deciding to leave immediately, she steps into Landis' car.

Back in town the four attend a supper club and while there all agree to meet on the morrow on Van Vorst's expensive yacht for a lavish party. Burning with jealousy, Lydia is coerced into accepting.

CHAPTER 48
DREAMS OF LOVE

Through the open windows of young Mrs. Landis Ridgeway's bedroom at Royal Cliff blew fresh and fragrant morning breezes. Scent of wild flowers mingled with the "tang" of the sea, and the sun made great splashes on the pretty pink-and-whiteness of the apartment.

It was a simple room—"quite a la jeune fille," as the bride's mother-in-law described it—and it suited Rosilyn.

Perhaps it was the only chamber in the whole big mansion that had been furnished and decorated entirely according to her own simple taste.

Rosilyn loved that room of hers. It was her own particular retreat—that, and the wind-swept cliffs.

She would roam those cliffs for hours, perched between sea and sky. There, in the midst of solitude, and gazing far out over the tossing water her own troubles would seem somehow lessened, and a certain peace would steal into her heart.

Then she would retrace her steps to where the cliffs shelved gradually downward to sea level, and a dandy little bay was reached. It was a pretty spot, and Rosilyn would lie out in the sunshine, dreaming—or hunting for quaint little shells—or dabbling in the sea-pools that the tide left among the rocks.

This was the point nearest to Royal Cliff, and a path led from the grounds down to a boat-house now being painted, too, for soon a "house warming" was to be given in honor of the renovation of the old place, and the installation of its new mistress.

Rosilyn dreaded this event. Landis' gay friends—how could she cope with them?

And Lydia Harbrook!

There was a Spanish dancing girl as well, with whom rumor had coupled her husband. He had been seen with her in public, and his mother was disturbed. Several of the gossips had already dropped a hint or two in the bride's ear.

But she was much too proud to show her hurt.

On this fragrant morning, when the breezes woke her, she came back to earth with a sense of happiness and buoyancy.

She rose and dressed and breakfasted, and made herself so pleasant to Mrs. Ridgeway Senior, (who if the truth be told, was beginning to be seriously uneasy over Landis' prolonged absences from his wife's side) that that good lady's heart was really touched.

"I'm afraid I'll dull for a child like you down here alone," she said. "An old woman like me isn't much company. Once the decorators and painters are finished, we must fill the house with young company. You'll like that, Rosilyn?"

"I don't know I shall. I—I am quite happy," the bride had prevaricated.

Landis had been many days gone. If only he had written.

Not that he wasn't interested in the renovating of the house. He loved every attic and stone of the old place, and had taken the keenest interest in the work, spending hours with foremen and advisers.

But now that the business was nearly finished, he was off to fresh fields and pastures. That meant Lydia Harbrook. Rosilyn's heart contracted at the thought.

Shortly after breakfast, she contrived to slip off alone along the cliffs. What an enchanted summer morning! Butterflies darted among the little wildflowers that spangled the green grass in clumps of yellow and of mauve and pink.

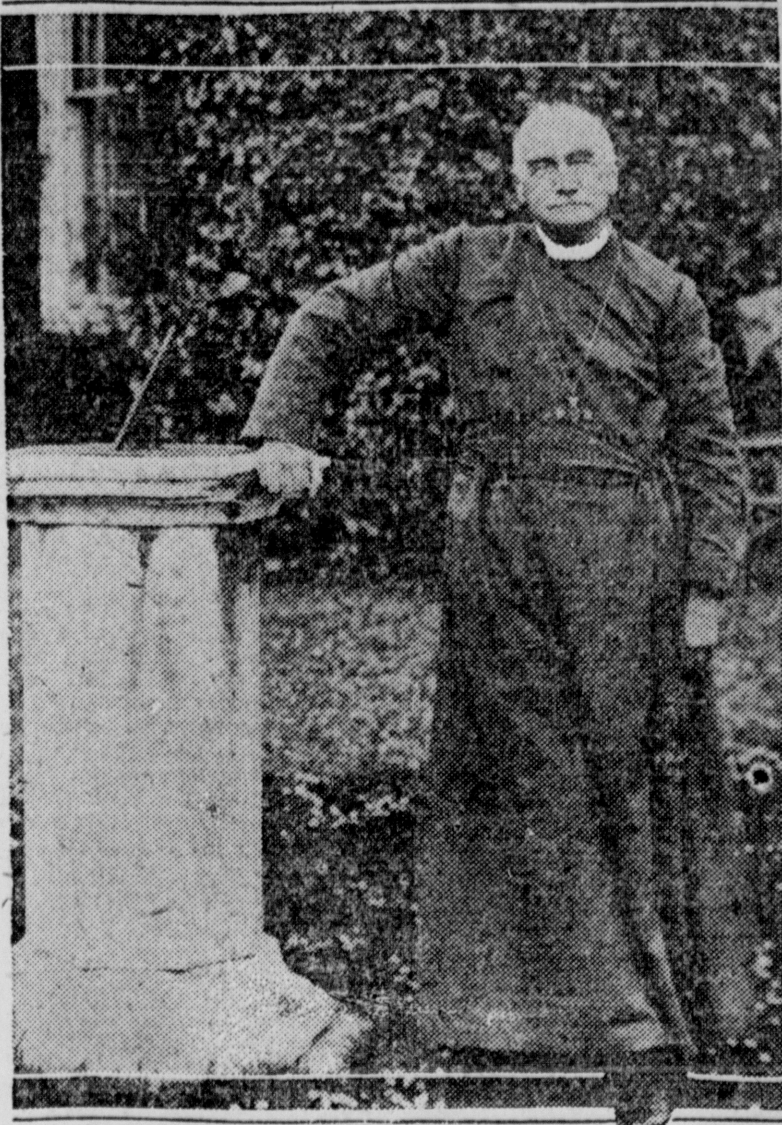

On, on she walked, dreaming of happiness that, like a will-o-the-wisp, was somewhere farther along the road of life—that magic happiness and utter peace that all souls crave.

The scenery grew wilder, more romantic. Rosilyn rested in the warm sunshine. She loved the feel of it on her bare arms and unshaded face.

"I must have gypsy blood in me," she said.

After a time she went on further till presently she saw—lying behind a gorse-bush—the recumbent figure of a man. He was quite some distance from her, and appeared to be sleeping, and as she drew a little nearer, she saw, with a start of astonishment and nervousness, that the portion of his jaw and face which appeared below a hat tilted well down to keep the sun

His Grace, the Right Reverend Arthur E. W. Ingram, Bishop of London, leaves England soon on a tour which will take him into most of the capitals of the world. off, was uncommonly like Mr. Briscoe, and so was the figure, though he was not nearly so smartly dressed.

"It can't be he!" She drew away as fast as possible, afraid that the slumberer might wake. It was lonely in this spot and Mrs. Ridgeway had already censured her for these solitary ramblings. She retraced her steps.

If it were really Mr. Briscoe, why was he in the neighborhood? And why so far from any road or any sign of habitation?

He had had an unkempt air, almost as though he had spent the whole night out-of-doors, beside that bush!

But that, of course, was too absurd. Mr. Briscoe was a sybarite for comfort, and a man of means.

It wasn't possible that he had come down here like this, without his car and chauffeur for the purpose of spying on her? The young girl shivered at the thought.

It wasn't possible that he was in league with the Harbrook woman, to come here and make mischief between herself and Landis?

She looked fearfully over her shoulder, but a slight rising of the ground hid the neighborhood behind from her. The bush and its sleeping tenant was now out of sight.

Thinking she heard a step as though someone were following, she broke into a frightened run. She ran blindly, frantically, and at topmost speed, racing over the uneven ground.

And then, before she realized it,

WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy

Mrs. Belle Thompson, of Georgia, was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."—Mrs. BELLE THOMPSON, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.
